The hand shadows in this book are too difficult for a child to produce. Also, many of them are of people's faces. I didn't find much value in it as a gift for a child of any age really. I'll be purchasing something else. 1 of 1 people found the following review helpful. I like it, but it is not a normal size By Honest Abe This is a very small book. I like it, but it is not a normal size. FYI. I bought it as a gift and it was pretty wimpy. Get it along with something else if it is a gift. 0 of 0 people found the following review helpful. We may love it later By Jenifer M. Swindle We may love it later, but our daughter is too young to appreciate the intricate animals. And they actually take more work to figure out than we anticipated.

This charming book shows you how to have fun with a pastime that has delighted children and adults for generations: making shadow pictures on the wall with your hands and fingers. Selected from the pages of two clever 19th-century picture books, 28 hand-shadow illustrations demonstrate how to create marvelous images of a goose, deer (with antlers), birds, a bunny, a dog, an elephant, a tortoise, and a host of other familiar creatures. For extra enjoyment, the illustrations are accompanied by lively, often hilarious verses by Frank Jacobs, whose zany humor and wacky parodies have appeared in numerous publications. With this book and a bit of practice, you'll soon be delighting friends and relatives with an entertaining performance of shadow art.
