Ken Pitek : Halloween Propmaker's Handbook before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised Halloween Propmaker's Handbook:

Clearly was meant to have color pictures showing the black light projects and black light reflective goo. A little irritated that they are black and white for the price of the book. Otherwise, the information in the book for online resources is of great use, even though most of them have moved to different sites they are all easily accessible. Most of the ideas have encouraged us to try other ideas and ways of making things. Very creative and helpful to find a good starting point!1 of 1 people found the following review helpful. Only has the one real prop skullsBy PennyGives no real ideas on how to make anything but these stupid skulls. Wish I had my money back. Very disappointed 0 of 0 people found the following review helpful. I like what it does have By George Mills Thought it would have more up to date plans. I like what it does have.

With some corn syrup, drink mix powder and water, you can make a splendid concoction of stage blood without spending an arm and a leg. From budget-friendly frights to sophisticated props, this book offers dozens of imaginative ways to haunt a house for Halloween. Readers will find generously illustrated step-by-step instructions for creating a barbecued skull, devil eyes, bonehead tableware, a magic bottle, a glowing brain and other projects. The book details ways to enhance an eerie ambiance with effects like blacklights and music. Props use many common household items and tools. Where specialty items are required, the author tells where they can be found at a reasonable cost. Projects take anywhere from a few hours to several days to complete. The chapters ooze with tips on topics like creating apprehension and surprise, using design to guide guests, creatively using plastic skulls, and making papier-mâché masks and molded hands. There are recipes for fake blood and vomit and ideas for using them, and other creative and adaptable ideas. Appendices include Merry Halloween, which advises, One of the best times to look for bargains on Halloween prop-building materials is right after Christmas; an alphabetical listing of props and supplies and where they can be found; a list of specialty suppliers; and an epitaph inviting comments.

"ongoing recommendation"--Midwest Book .About the Author Ken Pitek lives in Marseilles, Illinois. His work has been published in Haunted Attraction Magazine and other publications.
