3 of 3 people found the following review helpful. and I love this new one just as much as the othersBy Trevor L. TolliverI have all the books in the series, and I love this new one just as much as the others. I'm not a techy or handy person, so I love the way the Mitchells build static figures with the simplest items in the simplest ways, and even the animated projects were easy for someone like me to produce and customize. And who knew that spray foam had so many creative uses? Other reviewers have been put off by this book's overall spider theme, but the practical mechanics and constructions they present here can be converted to any theme or haunt idea (I've used their hot-coals-and-cauldron idea for more than one theme, as well as their ingenious and simple way to create gnarled old trees for your haunt). As always, the directions are simple, the pictures are gorgeous, and whether it's the dead of winter or a boiling summer, opening up their books inspire me to work on Halloween! I adore the series, and can't wait for more.0 of 0

If You Want a Spider-themed Haunt...By BobIf you want a spider-themed haunt, then this is the book for you. Otherwise, skip it. Her first 3 books had a better variety of home haunt props.

How to Haunt Your House brings new chapters flying, bubbling and crawling to the series in Book Four. There are Flying Phantasms, Mad Labs, Ten Foot Trees, and a variety of home spun spiders all wrapped in our new favorite spider web material using beef netting! We took our theme Invasion of the Spiders to a whole new level and turned our toxic spider experiments into a variety of creepy crawlies perfect for the home haunt. It's time to get inspired by old B-movie monsters! Turn off the lights and crank up the screams... It's time to get prepared for the invasion!
