There are lists of questions to isolate what a person actually wants/needs/expects from a particular journal, beautiful photographs of both process and result, nine walk-thrus of wildly different journals, and clear instructions for creating them. As a result, I was able to (finally!) build a journal that satisfies my laundry-list of must-haves. 1 of 1 people found the following review helpful. The book styles are original and tailor made to the user. My only difficulty with this book was the clarity of the instructions. There are no photographs of the various steps in the book making process, only line drawings that I found confusing. 0 of 0 people found the following review helpful. From Booklist*Starred * Despite the proliferation and popularity of e-books, its good to know that handmade booksjournals that support a passion or avocation or collection of insightsare still in vogue. What three-time author Diehn (previous works are The Decorated Page, 2002; The Decorated Journal, 2006) has accomplished is that oh-so-important reader inspiration, which will lead to the I can do this conviction. She teaches us how, instead of buying ready-fashioned blank books, to create the one most suited to our needs through both a series of questions (e.g., Need a place to carry writing and drawing equipment? Should the binding be able to accommodate extra pages or other flat elements?) and eight different personal journals, each revealing different goals and uses. Especially savvy is the actual design of her how-to, colored and illustrated professionally to resemble a journal. Even the instructions for 10 covers, 16 books, and other techniques are lovingly explained in a combination of line drawings, words, and color examples. Everything included inside is ready to take anyone on a personal journaling expedition. A seven-page gallery of actual hand-made books adds interest. --Barbara Jacobs
